expired suddenly intestate in December, 1863. General McCleHan and Peter Stew art Macliver, as next of kiu, claimed and succeeded to the entire fortune of that lady, which comprised the moiety of the large residue of Lord Clyde's estate. His Lordship, who sympathized deeply with the Confederate cause, was not aware of his blood relationship to General Mchis blood relationship to General Mc-Clellan, whose military strategy he unsparingly criticised and condemned. Miss Campbell was also unacquainted with the two gentlemen who, through her delay in making a will, became her legal heirs. On Christmas day, 1863, she said to a friend. "It is very wrong in my brother to put off making his will until his last illness. The first thing I shall do after the New Year will be to make mine." She did not live to see the New Year.
